SMART.
ENGAGING.
RELEVANT.

From the Chief Executive Officer

I can’t believe how 2019 has flown by! It’s been an exciting year for your local public media station. On WHRO TV 15, we’ve seen the release of riveting and informative documentaries including Chasing the Moon—accompanied by a collection of moon-landing memories from our audience members, Ken Burns’ Country Music, City Voices about the Norfolk Street Choir, and more.

We’ve hosted fun events and screenings as well as gatherings that bring the community together around important topics. Last month we held a transportation town hall to connect regional transportation leaders and members of the community for a conversation about the future of transportation in our area.

WHRV and WHRO FM have continued to bring you the latest news and arts programs along with music and conversations with local artists. On weekdays at noon on WHRV, we feature programs that tackle local and national issues that affect our listeners. Many of you are already dedicated listeners to these shows, but if you haven’t checked them out yet, you can learn more about them on page 5. It’s our hope that each time you tune in to one of our stations you’ll find engaging content that entertains, enlightens, and informs.

We also have some great programs lined up this month for the holiday season. Whether you enjoy jazz, bluegrass, Broadway tunes, folk, classical music, or traditional Christmas carols, we have something for everyone. On December 22, from 6 p.m. to midnight, WHRV FM will present A Holiday to Remember, our holiday program that we feature every year on the Sunday prior to Christmas. It’s the perfect soundtrack as you wrap up your holiday preparations.

Speaking of wrapping things up, as we wrap up the year with this season of giving, I want to extend a huge thank you to each of you for your faithfulness in supporting our work. It is because of your generosity that we are able to do all the things we do. As 2019 comes to close, we have a couple more opportunities for you to show your support. In this first week of December, our winter TV pledge drive is underway, and our winter radio drive is coming up in the second week of December. I hope you will take these opportunities to consider including WHRO Public Media in your holiday gift giving. Your additional contribution will help us continue to produce engaging and educational programs for Eastern Virginia.

Happy Holidays!

Bert Schmidt
President & Chief Executive Officer
Mary Ellen Chase, an American scholar, teacher, and writer was quoted as saying, “There is no substitute for books in the life of a child.” As we embrace the technology age, we have found that children still love books. For the past 20 years, WHRO Children’s Services, along with grants and local foundations, has provided books to support children in challenging circumstances to start their own libraries. The Children’s Services department will be conducting a book drive December 2 through December 13.

“Some parents said their children slept with their book,” said Carolyn Miller, a youth associate at Horace C. Downing Library in Norfolk. “I think First Books is a wonderful program.” Books are distributed to the children after parent trainings and at school and community events. After attending the parent trainings, some parents commented that they had not previously realized how valuable reading was.

‘Once you open the door to reading, the world is open and there is no turning back,” said Miller. “This program encourages and motivates them to read more and help see the world in a different way. The parents also enjoy reading the books that were given to the children, and it has opened a new world of increased reading for the parents.”

If you would like to donate a new book appropriate for grades pre-K through fifth, please mark them “Attention: Children’s Services” and give them to the receptionist at the WHRO offices at 5200 Hampton Boulevard. If you would like more information about WHRO’s First Books initiative, please contact us at children@whro.org

Our three radio personalities shown on the cover probably need no introduction. You already know their shows. HearSay with Cathy Lewis, Another View with Barbara Hamm Lee, and Watching America with Dr. Alan Campbell each bring you thoughtful public affairs programming every day at noon on WHRV FM. Starting January 9, we will have a schedule flip with Another View airing on Thursdays and Watching America airing on Fridays. HearSay with Cathy Lewis, now in its 24th year, will continue on Mondays, Tuesdays, and Wednesdays.

HearSay with Cathy Lewis is the place where Eastern Virginia comes together to talk about the issues and ideas that are important to our region. Listeners have tuned to 89.5 at noon to talk about everything from politics to pop culture, including monthly series on pets and gardening.

HearSay does more than let listeners hear from the experts. Cathy Lewis invites callers to ask questions, exchange ideas, and share their own thoughts. “Our listeners have a lot on their minds, and because we’ve created an inviting space in the midday, we have some of the most amazing conversations about the issues that affect all of us,” she says, “and while we may disagree, we’re never disagreeable, and the civil environment we create is what listeners tell us they value most.”

Another View, our weekly call-in radio talk show that discusses today’s topics from an African American perspective, is moving to Thursdays at noon, while Watching America will round out the week on Fridays. “This move crystalizes WHRV’s strengths and tone by placing our tremendous local and civics-based discussions fostered by Cathy and Barbara consecutively during the week Monday through Thursday, while giving Watching America a more formidable space preceding Ken Rudin’s Political Junkie and Science Friday with Ira Flatow,” explained Chuck Doud, director radio program and audience strategy.

Originally a television program, Another View was created to give the African American community “another view” of itself, and the rest of the community “another view” of the African American community. “This mission is more critical now than ever as we as a society grapple with racial, socioeconomic, health, and other issues facing people of color,” Barbara Hamm Lee said. “We firmly believe that learning about each other, discovering commonalities, and embracing differences will heal rather than divide us. Our show is about the Black community, but it is for everyone!”

Watching America, WHRV’s newest addition to the station’s midday programming, also explores topics from a unique perspective. “I am British by birth and American by choice,” explained host Alan Campbell, “so Watching America is a show where you listen to appreciate America from the perspective of a person who is unapologetically in love with his adopted country. In the tradition of the former host of Masterpiece Theater, Alistair Cooke, I like to think that I am able to reacquaint Americans with the wonder of themselves and their land.”

“I am indebted to so many people for the rapid success of Watching America,” Campbell said. “In particular, I am always mindful when in the studio of Cathy and Barbara, who have secured a track for me to follow by their stellar professionalism in the years prior to my arrival at WHRV. It is they who have anchored the midday hour and have built such a loyal audience, so when the “On-Air” light goes on, in my mind, I always doff my hat in gratitude to those ladies.”

The lineup change begins January 9. Tune in to 89.5 FM each weekday at noon so you will never miss a moment of these three great programs. You can also catch up on past episodes online!

A Holiday to Remember

The holidays always evoke memories—from late-night toy assembly by sleep-deprived parents to joyful family dinners. One of the finest traditions here at WHRV is our annual Sunday Night before Christmas programming, which this year celebrates everything from warm holiday music of the islands to a remembrance of classic albums of the season. You'll hear local and regional songwriters and national artists presenting songs sure to be recalled as favorites. And, our annual WHRO staff contribution to this year's program has them singing the Gene Autry classic “Here Comes Santa Claus.” It is a rendition not to be missed—nor quickly forgotten! Plus, all through the season, we have special programs for you to enjoy as you finish the wrapping, start cooking that dinner, stuff the stockings, and begin creating more wonderful memories as WHRV presents A Holiday to Remember on December 22.

6:00 p.m. An Island Christmas with songs from the tropical warmth of the Caribbean with artists from Jamaica, and The Bahamas, Hawaiian musicians, and local beachcomber singer/songwriter Mike Aiken.

7:00 p.m. A Pickin’/Classic Country Christmas. Music from Bluegrass royalty Bill Monroe and Del McCoury is shared with contemporary artists Rhonda Vincent and Open Road joining some classic country greats in a two-hour Americana Holiday feature.

9:00 p.m. Staff sing-along to “Here Comes Santa Claus” and An Acoustic Christmas with local artists Skip Friel, Jim Bulleit, Narissa Bond, Ron Fetner, Jim Masters, Jerry Sowers, and others presenting their Christmas wishes in song.

11:00 p.m. Celebrating the Great Christmas Albums. Jeff Sander, host of WHRV’s Lost in the Shuffle joins us for a remembrance of some of the great Christmas albums—featuring The Carpenters, The Monkees, The Beach Boys, and other classic holiday releases.

12:00 a.m. A Christmas Road Trip. Follow us through the communities of America and songs celebrating the holidays of the region. We'll hear cowboys singing on the range, wonderful harp classics from New England, gumbo tunes from the bayou, and traditional music from Appalachia. Holiday customs from across the nation are shared to a backdrop of distinct music from the area.

The winter nights here in Hampton Roads can get mighty cold, so Out of the Box has come up with a way to warm you up—free concerts every week by some of the area’s brightest musical stars! The mission of Out of the Box is to play the newest releases by rock, Americana, and blues artists, especially those made by performers in our own backyard.

Every year we host live concerts by the musicians who have distinguished themselves by releasing superb recordings that were played on Out of the Box during the previous year. Each Thursday night from early January to early March, I broadcast Out of the Box from the Sandler Center and feature on-air live performances from each act, interspersed with all the recorded music that I play every night. You can not only hear these artists on the radio, you can see them live on stage in the intimate confines of the Miller Theater inside the Sandler Center.

Over the past six years we’ve seen concerts from artists like Seth Stainback & Roosterfoot, Fox and the Bear, Anthony Rosano & the Conqueroos, Mike Aiken, and The Last Bison. The series won the Veer Magazine local music award for outstanding concert series in 2019.

The audiences we’ve seen at past shows have been so receptive of the artistry of the acts that each week the Miller Theater is transformed into a real listening room. The artists play mostly original songs, so just by attending these free shows you’re showing your support for the local music scene. We will be announcing this year’s lineup soon, and we hope to warm up some of those cold winter nights in 2020 with great music!

Julia’s will said a lot about her.
What does your will say about you?

Although Julia Atwater Bristow died in 2010 at age 85, today this retired artist and government writer is sending 49 students to college. Julia’s estate plans included a charitable bequest to the Hampton Roads Community Foundation to forever help students from Norfolk and the Eastern Shore achieve their dreams. Paint your own vision of the future by letting your will say a lot about you.
