Locally owned by 19 regional school systems, WHRO is a public service institution of education, culture and citizenship utilizing its communication resources to serve and interact throughout Eastern Virginia.

@WHRO

From the Chief Executive Officer

We are gearing up for an exciting fall at WHRO. First, I'd like to thank everyone who supported us last month during our television pledge drive. Without your support, the work we do would not be possible! Your contributions enable us to provide vital educational services to the local community and continue to air the television and radio programs you enjoy.

I'd also like to thank Governor Terry McAuliffe for helping us announce that WHRO's online Earth Science course will be distributed free of charge to all 132 public school divisions, 942 private schools and homeschool students throughout the Commonwealth of Virginia, reaching a potential 1.3 million K–12 students. These online courses are normally available for school divisions to purchase, but through the generosity of Jane Batten and the Batten Environmental Education Initiative, we are able to offer this course at no cost. This will enable every school in Virginia to provide an engaging online learning experience in this critical subject.

I am excited to announce the beginning of what I hope will become a new Saturday night tradition for families in Eastern Virginia. Cinema 15 is a collection of classic movies that WHRO TV will begin airing this month. Join us every Saturday night to see the work of legendary actors and actresses in films like Breakfast at Tiffany's, Casablanca, and Singin' in the Rain. On Saturday, September 2, at 8 p.m., we will air the first film, Meet Me in St. Louis starring Judy Garland. Read about upcoming films at whro.org/cinema15

Speaking of television programs, I'd like to share another change we recently made. It is never an easy decision to remove a program from the schedule, but beginning September 2, WHRO TV will no longer air The Lawrence Welk Show. The program has been out of production for 35 years, and overall viewership of the show has decreased significantly over the past several years. I appreciate the dedication that fans have shown to the program.

In other programming news, home cooks will enjoy the addition of Christopher Kimball's Milk Street. We are thrilled to add this new program to our lineup. From Thailand to Szechuan, from Peru to Tel Aviv, the show brings the best of home cooking to public television. The first season will premiere on Saturday, September 9, at 9:30 a.m.

Lastly, The Vietnam War, a new documentary from Ken Burns, debuts on Sunday, September 17, at 8 p.m. This 10-part series tells the epic story of the Vietnam War as it has never been told before on film. It includes rarely seen archival footage from sources around the globe and photographs taken by some of the most celebrated photojournalists of the 20th century.

It's sure to be a sensational month of programming. You don't want to miss it!

The Vietnam War: WHRO Remembers Those Who Served

This month's premiere of Ken Burns' new documentary, The Vietnam War, has provided a unique opportunity to take a personal look at the stories behind those who went off to war. As we have prepared for the release of this epic documentary, it was important to us to reconnect to these brave veterans, not just as servicemen, but as the vibrant people they were—husbands, fathers, brothers, and friends to those left behind. We've done this by finding and sharing their stories.

We found stories like that of Annabelle Driver Hamman, whose husband perished when his helicopter crashed during an extraction. Dallas Driver was 22 years old. The couple met in high school. "He was such a sweet and honest man," Hamman wrote on a website offering remembrances to veterans. "We got married on May 30, 1969 and had 2½ wonderful weeks together before he went to Vietnam. I will always love him. I just wish there was closure because they never found his body, and that still haunts me to this day."

Dennis Ricker, of Virginia Beach, recalled the loss of his high school buddy, Ronald Ange. "As they were bringing your remains back to Virginia Beach, I was packing my duffle getting ready to head to Vietnam. At your funeral, I cried like a little baby. The next day (on your 19th birthday) I boarded that plane to the other side of the world."

WHRO shared some of these remembrances at a special preview screening of the new documentary. We also shared displays of graffiti that were recovered from transport ships that carried troops to Vietnam. Through these messages preserved in ink we heard from young servicemen who expressed their hopes and fears through drawings and brief notes.

Just as Burns' documentary presents a view of the war from multiple perspectives, we wanted to explore the war from different angles as well. In partnership with the Dong Hung Temple in Virginia Beach, we fostered conversations between members of the American and Vietnamese communities. You can read more about it on page 10.

We are excited about the debut of Burns' film because the story of the Vietnam War is our story—a critical piece of our history that we want to explore and learn from. We hope you will take the time to tune in for this stunning piece of filmmaking, but we also hope you will take a moment to get to know some of the brave veterans from Virginia who fought in the war. You can find their stories at whro.org/vietnamwar

The Music of The Vietnam War

During World War I, soldiers carried song books in their kit bags. In World War II, some soldiers had access to radios and could hear Glenn Miller and the Army-Air Force Band perform. Others were lucky enough to catch Bob Hope headline a USO show. During the Korean War, the military set up its own radio network, Armed Forces Radio (Korea). Vietnam had all these outlets and more. Its GIs brought their own radios and instruments from home. They bought records and swapped tapes of their favorite music. They listened to official outlets as well as pirate stations and Radio Hanoi – which would play American popular music as an enticement to get soldiers to tune in.

Whether they preferred country, soul, or rock & roll, music was their soundtrack to the war. Vietnam was the first war fought to a soundtrack, with over 4,000 war-related songs written and recorded between 1965–73. The lyrics were patriotic, controversial, and often protest centered and were essential to America. Join WHRV host Jae Sinnett as he takes you on a journey, celebrating the best music of the Vietnam era and focusing on the stories and artists behind the music. The Music of Vietnam, Friday, September 15, at 7 p.m. on WHRV 89.5 FM. Local broadcast of The Vietnam War is provided by Atlantic Shores, Thomas Nelson Community College, and Norfolk Academy.

Music and The Seasons

Classical announcers like to match up programming with the weather. During a recent heat wave, I programmed languid music like Debussy (the Images for Orchestra) and Delius (the Florida Suite). "Muy caliente," as they say south of the border? Bring on zarzuela music, a Mexican Hat Dance, and some choice morsels cooked up by Gustavo Dudamel and his smokin' Simon Bolivar Orchestra of Venezuela. As the weather changes, so does the music.

Fall brings on the Harvest Home Suite, Autumn from Haydn's great oratorio The Seasons, and Douglas Moore's Farm Journal to help bring in the crops. Come winter and you have the Vaughan Williams Sinfonia Antarctica to keep you entertained on a snowy night. With the arrival of spring and the return of greenery, you can count on Wilhelm Peterson-Bergers's The Flowers of Froso and the Highgrove Suite, music inspired by the gardens on the estate of Prince Charles. And – don't forget Cloudburst from the Grand Canyon Suite on a really storm day. Classical radio and the weather—quite a combo!

Remembering Vietnam: A Day of Sharing

A group of local Vietnam veterans and members of the local Vietnamese community shared a powerful experience recently at the Dong Hung Temple in Virginia Beach where they discussed their Vietnam War experiences. WHRO worked in partnership with the Buddhist temple to organize the event. Richard Luong, a staff member at WHRO, attends the temple and suggested the idea to temple leaders.

"I thought it would be really great to have folks who experienced the war and came back to this country, and also those who migrated to this country, be able to share things with each other," he explained. "The story started in Vietnam, but then it continued in the states too with both sides."

The attendees shared a meal and a tea ceremony together. They also joined in meditation and a guided discussion. Buddhist monk Thich Chuc Thanh, who serves at the temple, said he hoped the event would help participants let go of past hurts. "There are people who carry many memories," he said. "This is an opportunity for them to share, and when they share they can let go."

Several of the Vietnam veterans recounted their experiences of fighting in the war at a young age and not knowing how to feel about the people they encountered in Vietnam. Vietnamese immigrants shared harrowing stories of having to flee their homes.

One participant shared that he sometimes feels animosity from people who learn that he is Vietnamese. "Will there be a time where we no longer have that history that divides us?" he asked. "Will there be a day where if I say that I am Vietnamese, it has no effect?"

Veteran Les Page assured him the veterans he knows hold no hostility toward Vietnamese people. "We never doubted the thankfulness, loyalty, and devotion to the Americans by the Vietnamese people, because they were so thankful that we were there."

Luong agreed. He grew up in America hearing accounts of how his family left Vietnam for the United States. "If they were here today, they would say that they definitely owe a lot of gratitude to the American soldiers who were there."

It is one reason he wanted the temple to host the event. "You often hear about how soldiers came back and they weren't treated very well by Americans, but you don't hear the side from the Vietnamese immigrants who are actually incredibly appreciative of what they did," he explained.

Welcome Home

A little over two years ago in the summer of 2015, a Vietnam veteran, Ray, who was a corporal in the 173rd Airborne Brigade Combat Team, stopped by the station interested in learning more about WHRO's veteran initiative. Ray and I sat in my office and he began to share his experiences, his PTSD, and how his family struggles to cope as he works to stay out of "the zone"—which can be triggered at any moment.

What I did not know was this was just the beginning of a relationship, not with just Ray, but with many often forgotten veterans and heroes of the Vietnam War. Some are able to share openly, others share just bits and pieces, and others keep this part of their life buried. Many just mention that they served. But an underlying theme is often the extreme disrespect and cruelty they received as they returned home. One Vietnam veteran revealed she had been spit on in an airport upon returning home in uniform; another was told by a waitress he should have died in Vietnam. One veteran mentioned he had never been thanked for his service, ever, until stopping by the station one day.

In March 2016, I attended a Vietnam War 50th Anniversary Commemoration and Pinning Ceremony at the VA in Hampton. The atmosphere was one of comradery, support, and gratitude as veterans, civilians, and active duty military came together to honor those who served in Vietnam. I ran into Ray, who was attending with some of his fellow Vietnam veterans, and I was humbled and proud to personally provide them with their Commemoration pins. As they stood at attention for the pinning, you could feel a difference, almost a release, as the speakers and audience whole heartily thanked them for their service and welcomed them home to a round of applause and hugs for all. Ray and I chatted afterwards about what it meant to him. He spoke of how difficult it was coming to ceremonies in the past. "I didn't make it because I didn't feel I was ready to receive the welcome. Now I can talk to my buddies who feel the same way I did and let them know that everything will be okay.

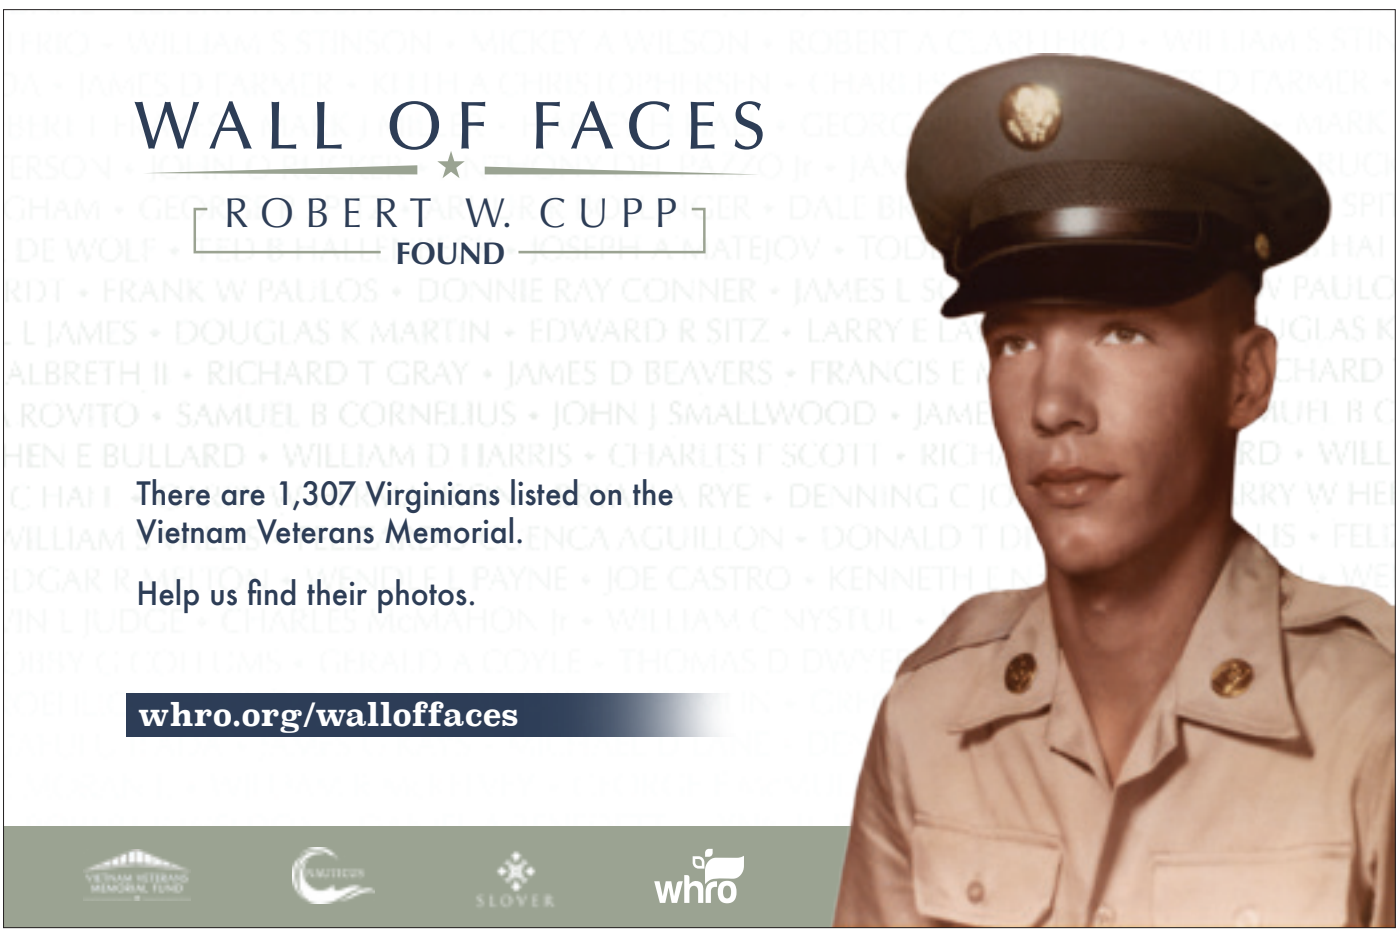
Veterans Coming Home



Challenges of Service

As active duty servicemen and women transition to civilian life, their next steps are crucial. Education is a path that can offer a future and career. Though it may seem like the straightforward choice considering veterans have access to the GI Bill, that is not always the case. William E. Brown III, Executive Director, Center for Military and Veterans Education (CMVE), and Associate Vice President for Strategic Partnerships at Tidewater Community College (TCC), works with veterans every day to ensure a successful start. Recently, he shared some of the educational barriers veterans face that can help us all better understand their struggles and, when able, offer support. As veterans return to college, Brown says he sees them face three common challenges:

Getting Started

"Veterans knew what it took to succeed in the military and are proud of what they have accomplished," Brown said. "Higher education is a whole new ballgame and veterans do not want to look like they do not know what they are doing in applying for school, navigating all the 'new' administrative requirements, selecting their programs, learning all the new offices and resources on the campus, and learning how to balance all they have to do to be a successful student, spouse, parent, and employee. Throw in that most veterans coming to school are older students and may not want to hang out with the traditional-aged students, and you have a group who may feel like they are all alone."

Feeling Pressured

"Student veterans are very serious about their education and know that they do not have any time to waste given that they are older, have families, and only have 36 months of GI Bill benefits. They are totally focused on getting their education, doing well in class, and learning the material. They have a very tough time relating to the 18-to 20-year-olds who may be a bit more interested in where the party is that night than in what is being discussed in class."

Hesitating to Ask for Help

"Veterans are also very proud that they can take care of themselves and will not always ask for help. This can carry over into their educational pursuits, as veterans are reluctant to use resources that are available to them. Much of the work of the military and veteran centers on campuses is to make sure the veterans know what is available to them and to walk them to the different offices if that is what it takes."

Fortunately, for veterans, services such as the CMVE at TCC are available at many local colleges and universities. The value of these services is proven through the many success stories that Brown and others have witnessed as veterans pass through their doors—initially cautious and reluctant—then later leave to pursue their passions.

Saturday nights have always been special in American culture. Whether reserved for an exceptional night out or a time for family gatherings, Saturdays signify a time to kick back, relax, and enjoy life. We had this concept in mind when we were looking at the Saturday evening schedule, and after much thought and hearing from our community, we made the decision to add classic movies to our lineup. We will explore the works of legendary actors and actresses in the most important films from their careers. From Audrey Hepburn in Breakfast at Tiffany's and Brad Pitt in A River Runs Through It, to Meryl Streep in Kramer VS. Kramer and Sidney Poitier in To Sir, with Love, we hope you will enjoy an exciting array of noteworthy performances.

On Saturday, October 14, we will host a free screening in the parking lot at WHRO of Some Like It Hot, featuring Marilyn Monroe, Tony Curtis, and Jack Lemmon. So gather your friends and family and join us for our classic movie night, commercial free and made possible by WHRO members. Cinema 15 joins the WHRO TV schedule Saturdays starting September 2, at 8 p.m.

Thanks for the Memories Mr. Welk

WHRO has been honored to air The Lawrence Welk Show for over 25 years. The program played an important nostalgic role for viewers, and many have fond memories of the show when it was in production from 1951 until 1982. There is not and never will be a program quite like it. It's been a wonderful run, and we thank Mr. Welk and the cast and crew for many years of entertainment as well as our members who supported the program for many years.
